Feminist Reflections, The Society Pages—Co-Editorial Chair and Columnist

Feminist Reflections is among the newest community blogs sponsored by The Society Pages. Our first posts started in July 2014. I currently serve as the co-editorial chair of our editorial team who all write regular columns and commission and edit guest posts from other scholars.

Inequality by (Interior) Design—Founder and Principle Writer

With more than 1,600 followers, and roughly 500,000 visitors to date, Inequality by (Interior) Design has a wide readership. I use the site as a space to archive some of my public sociology. Some Inequality by (Interior) Design posts are used as teaching resources at other institutions, a small collection have been published, and some of my posts have been featured on other sociology blogs, including: Sociological Images, Everyday Sociology, Social (In)Queery, and the Gender & Society blog.

Sociological Images, The Society Pages—Guest Editor, January-March 2017

Sociological Images is a blog helping to make sociological research, concepts, findings, and ideas public and to demonstrate that breadth of sociological inquiry and applicability. I served as Guest Editor of the blog for three months in 2017, writing and collecting guest post to produce roughly 3 posts each week.
